

NEW YORK TIMES
19 January 1985

Second Time Around, Inaugural Parties Glitter

By JOHN DUKA

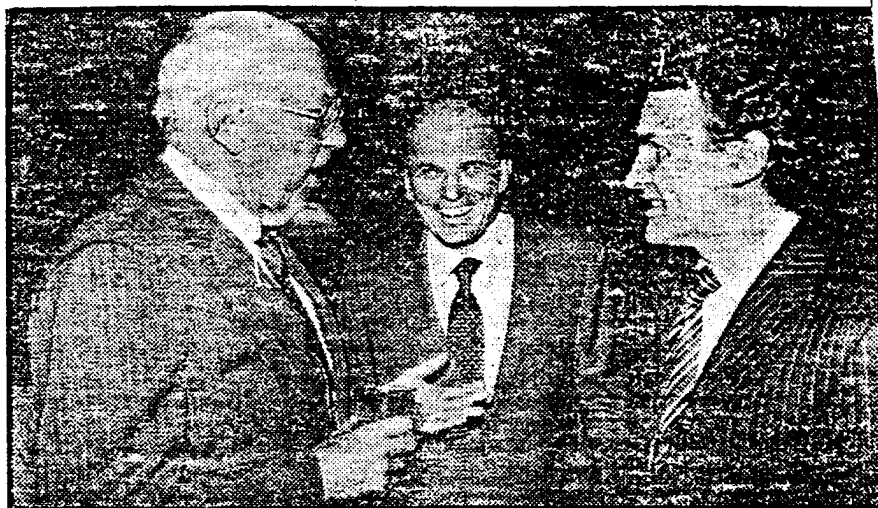

Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18 — Anyone who thought that the second inauguration of Ronald Wilson Reagan was going to be a quiet affair because it is his second time around, and because Washington is notably blasé about such things, was proved wrong as preinaugural festivities, public and private, went into full swing in Washington.

Keeping things quiet, however, has not met with much success. The list of Thursday's parties, public and private, was common knowledge, starting with a reception, complete with cake and green balloons, to celebrate the 18th anniversary of The American Spectator, an irreverent, conservative publication that is one of the President's favorites.

While many did not show up, those that did included Alexandra and Arnaud de Borchgrave, a senior associate at the Georgetown University Center for Strategic and International Studies, and William J. Casey, the Director of Central Intelligence. Mr. Casey echoed the feeling of many, or at least the Republicans, in Washington. "The inauguration," he said, "is a second new beginning."

William J. Casey; Richard Viguerie, center above, and R. Emmett Tyrrell Jr., American Spectator editor. JoCarol and Ronald Lauder, at right, with Caspar W. Weinberger at the British Embassy.